1 this juncture. I will on June 22nd decide, after the 2 submissions, whether or not I -- the court is of the view that 3 the successor claims are property of the bankruptcy estate and 4 subject to 362(a)(3).

5 I am overruling Mr. Satterly's objection. I don't 6 view it as a stay relief motion.

7 Parties are on notice of the parameters of section
8 362. I've said this before. Parties act at their own peril
9 with respect to 362. If creditors wish to have clarity they 10 could bring a motion before me. If the debtor seeks to have 11 clarity or enforcement, they can bring a specific motion before
12 me with respect to a particular case. I am loathe to enter
13 general -- generalized orders on matters when we're talking 14 about tens of thousands of matters.

15 At this juncture, the preliminary injunction that's 16 in effect now will continue through August 22nd. The court
17 will consider adding Janssen Kenvue as protected parties on 18 June 22nd. The court will rule on successor liability issues.
19 At least it's the court's intention to do that on January --
20 I'm sorry -- on June 22nd.

21 The parties that are protected parties to date, I 22 think all JJCI, Holdco, I think is a protected party. They 23 remain protected parties and covered by the existing 24 preliminary injunction that will remain in effect.

25 All right.
